

Balancing effort and results to provide you with a competitive edge

Business owners throughout Central Alberta are doing whatever it takes to weather the economic storm without having to sacrifice quality. Central Alberta IT support company Bulletproof InfoTech knows all about the fine balancing act between efforts and results.

Central Alberta business are confronted with huge challenges ranging from the ongoing demand to acquire new business, ensure staff issues are resolved and play bookkeeper and ensure the books are in order. In addition, many business owners from time to time attempt to be the computer fix-it person.

Watching expenses and increasing revenues are critical to the success of any business in good times and bad. The question we ask many of our clients is: "what is the hidden cost of the small business owner wearing multiple hats?" Information technology is one of the areas where many entrepreneurs try to eliminate additional costs by attempting to become the computer techy go-to person themselves. Entrepreneurs are often unwilling or unable to pick up the phone for much-needed technical expertise, knowing that a bill will be coming at the end of the month.

Times are changing! Central

Alberta's Bulletproof InfoTech is breaking new ground by providing results-based pricing with all services. This new and innovative methodology is providing businesses with a predictable budget for their IT services and taking away the shock that occurs each month when IT support invoices come in. This foundation for IT support rests on clear and well-defined goals and deliverables, not an indeterminate amount of effort. Instead of paying for each hour a computer tech works at your business, you have a clear budget ahead of time for your project or IT support plan.

With Bulletproof, you can now focus on getting your work done instead of watching the clock, wondering when your computer project will be done or how much this support call is going to cost you this time. "Interests of both companies are perfectly aligned," said Jeff Anderson, President of Bulletproof InfoTech. "Bulletproof takes responsibility for your computer systems".

Bulletproof InfoTech has offices in Red Deer and Calgary and serves business throughout Alberta with worry-free, hassle-free, fixed-cost and fully guaranteed IT support plans to fit your budget.

Contact Bulletproof today at 403.340.1011 for a free consultation on moving your business to results based service.

Bulletproof InfoTech helps small businesses just like you navigate through the confusion associated with technology. Business is demanding a partner who offers a stable networking environment, leverages creative technologies and provides IT solutions that matter to the success of your business.

